New Cabinet Editions
OF THE
Works of Washington Irving
In announcing several new editions, in a style of improved elegance and convenience, of the WORKS OF WASHINGTON IRVING, the publisher would take the opportunity of acknowledging the good reception which his efforts in the presentation of these favorite writings have heretofore received. In the several forms in which the various productions of the author of the "Sketch-Book" have been given to the public, it is estimated that the sale has reached no less than fifty thousand of the series, or more than a million volumes. Nor is the demand yet abated. On the contrary, new exertions of enterprise are required to meet the desires of a new generation of readers, and keep pace with the progress of taste and refinement in the typographic and other mechanic arts of the publisher's calling.
The motive of this perennial popularity is not far to seek. It is to be read on every page of he delightful volumes in which "Geoffrey Crayon" infused the happy inspiration of his genius in his devotion to themes which will always be regarded by successive generations of readers with no ordinary emotions of interest. The charm of the felicitious style of Washington Irving, the reflection of the amiable poetic spirit of the truely refined gentleman, would be felt on any topic on which the author had been pleased to bestow it. But it is for the ever-enduring fame of IRVING, that he chose for the exercise of his pen topics of undying value and importance. In his inviting Essays on human life and character in portraying manners, as in the "Sketch-Book," "Bracebridge Hall," and other volumes, he has touched, with mingled sentiment and humor, those emotions which are implanted in the hearts of all; while his topics of biography, of history and romance, are of such world-wide celebrity and passionate interest as the story of COLUMBUS and his followers, with their discoveries of the New World; the life of the founder of the nation, George Washington, drawing with it the narrative of the Civil and Military events of America during his remarkable career; the marvelous record of Mahomet, with the illustrations of the genius of his race in the romantic fact and legend of "The Tales of the Alhambra" and the "Conquest of Granada;" the felicity with which the author has linked his name with the birth-place of Shakespeare the genius of Oliver Goldsmith, the fame of Scott and Byron, and, not least, the humorous invention which, in Knickerbocker's irresistible chronicle of New York, has imputed a mythic interest to the bare early annals of his native city. It is thus that the writings of Washington Irving may be claimed to be imperishable, till what is not likely soon to happen, the same ever welcome themes are treated in some happier manner. The charm of Irving is his acceptability to all,—a grace and refinement to please the most fastidious; and his peculiar merit is readily appreciated by every reader; his good sense and humor, the air of enjoyment pervading his pages, has secured his works a home in both hemispheres, wherever the English language is understood. Of the few indispensable authors in every American library, Washington Irving is certainly among the foremost. The delight of childhood, the chivalric companion of refined womanhood, the solace of life at every period, his writing are an imperishable legacy of grace and beauty to his country men.
The new publications of these works will be in several forms of unusual elegance, and all, in proportion to a moderate price for each, combining good taste with economy. The series will be issued in the following order, punctually on the first day of each month until completed, beginning with October:

Bracebridge Hall.	Astoria.

Sketch Book.	Mahomet, 2 vols.

THE PRESS.

Saturday Morning, October 26, 1867.

☞ First Page to-day—The President of Mexico; Mr. Dickens on America; the Accident to the Empress Eugenie; Varieties.

Fourth Page—That Dreadful Boy from the Northern Monthly for November.

VIRGINIA, it appears, does want a convention. We are glad of it.

THAT standing trial of national patience, the trial of Jeff. Davis, is again on the tapis, and is being vigorously talked up. There is an appearance of earnestness in the present discussion of the question that may mean that we are actually to have a trial for treason. The government, the counsel on both sides, and Jeff. Davis himself, announce their readiness to proceed at the next term of the United States Circuit Court at Richmond. Chief Justice Chase writes to Judge Underwood that he will be present for one week after the beginning of the session on the 13th of November, but no longer, since the meeting of the Supreme Court will demand his presence at Washington at the expiration of that time. Now Davis's bond does not require him to appear before the 25th, and, if he insists upon availing himself of the latitude it gives him, he need not go to Richmond till the Chief Justice has departed. But it is understood that he will waive his rights in this respect, and is anxious to be arraigned before both Judges. There is no probability that the result will be different from that of the Surratt case—a disagreement of jury. The pannel must be made exclusively from whites, and if there can be found in Richmond a white jury that will convict a traitor reconstruction is more nearly consummated than anyone supposes it to be.

Mr. D. W. PRATT, the Liquor Agent at Farmington, is the man who sent six samples of liquors, said to have been received from the State Agency in this city, to Dr. Hayes of Boston for analysis just before the September election, and published in the Maine Standard a report that five of these samples were found unsuitable for medical use, suppressing however the important fact stated by Dr. Hayes, that the analysis was unsatisfactory and that larger quantities must be sent in order to ascertain fully the character of the liquors. It appeared afterwards that the samples had been either accidentally or intentionally put up in dirty bottles and that the report of Dr. Hayes applied in part to the contents mingled with the liquors. We learn from the Farmington Chronicle that five samples from the casks said to have been condemned by Dr. Hayes have since been put up in the presence of one of the Selectmen of Farmington, and forwarded to Dr. Hayes. Duplicate samples were forwarded at the same time to Dr. Goodale, State Assayer of Maine, at Saco. Both assayers have reported, and both declare that all the liquors are pure and suitable for agency use. The following extract from a letter received from Dr. Hayes is to the point:

Within the past month I have received eleven samples of liquors, from officials in your State. In one case the liquors had been perfumed and extended; in the other cases the liquors were pure and of good quality. At least six fluid ounces of any liquors are required for a full analysis; in the case mentioned above there was less than two ounces in the largest sample.

This completes the exposure of the smallest electioneering trick ever contrived by grown men. If the liquors had been unwholesome the Republican party would not have been responsible for their quality. To make them unwholesome in order to get a report from Dr. Hayes, was a petty fraud worthy of the muddy brains which conceived the notion of holding the Republican party responsible for the judgment and good conduct of the State Agent.

THEY have a charmingly free and easy style of doing things out West. Hon. Aaron Shaw, an ex-congressman and ex-judge of Illinois, while attending court at Laurenceville, challenged the prosecuting attorney to a foot race for five dollars a side. The challenge was accepted, the race run and won by Judge Shaw. The grand jury has found an indictment against both gentlemen for gaming. The adventitious aids to the dignity of the bench and bar, which are still relied upon in England, are distasteful to our democratic instincts, but the gown and wig of English jurists are of some value after all, if only these things can prevent judges from running foot races on a wager.

ONE of the strangest hallucinations on record is that of Hugh McGuire of Boston, recently arraigned for chopping his wife. Being while under the influence of intoxicating liquors to which he is much addicted. Hugh protested that he was never drunk in his life and steadfast of all, that for ten years he had upheld the flag of his country, and was in fifteen battles under McClellan. Giving the "great Union" credit for Rosecrans' battles in West Virginia, and that which he fought on board the gunboat at Harrison's Landing, he is not entitled to that number. However Hugh's imagining are not stranger than those of politicians who dream that "Little Mac" will be more successful as a Presidential candidate in 1868 than he was in 1864.

THE Old Guard, edited by C. Chauncey Burr, takes its Copperheadism "straight" with no infusion of qualifying diluents. It is the "plain devil" all over, and is at no pains to steal the livery of Heaven like some of its contemporaries. The following is one of its latest gems:

Abraham Lincoln was, without doubt, the most fatal man that ever lived upon this earth, and in four brief years did more evil to mankind than the worst man that ever lived accomplished in a lifetime. The cause he led is the most unnatural, impious, and sinful that has ever afflicted the world, and the means of its accomplishment the vilest, most dishonest, and devilish that ever degraded our race, or stained the earth since time began. On the contrary, the real (though not assumed) cause led by Jefferson Davis is the noblest, most beneficent, true, and glorious cause that men ever battled for on this earth, and the means employed were the grandest, most Christian, and chivalrous ever witnessed in the world's history.

Political Notes.

It is thought the Alabama Convention will be ordered for the first of November.

A Minnesota paper is severe on a recent article in the New York Citizen. It says: "Miles O'Reilly asserts that twice as many Democrats went to the war as Republicans. Does Miles mean for us to count both armies?"

The attempt to organize a party in the South in opposition to reconstruction meets with no success. Only half a dozen out of the sixty-one counties of Mississippi sent delegates to the Anti-Congressional Convention so imposingly advertised for weeks in every county.

One thousand foreigners have been naturalized in New York preparatory to voting the Democratic ticket at the coming election, and more are being manufactured.

Wendell Phillips is lecturing on the "Dawdling Congress." For a speaker whose reputation rests so much on the classic purity of his style, this sounds a little too much like Walt Whitman.

Horace Maynard withdrew from the Senatorial canvass in Tennessee. Senator elect Brownlow does not take his seat till March 4, 1869.

Gov. Ward of New Jersey, chairman of the National Republican Committee states a majority of the Committee agree on June as the time and Chicago as the place of holding the National Convention.

Hon. Durbin Ward promised the Butler County, Ohio, Democracy a barrel of tar and a barrel of whisky if they would give 2000 majority. They did it and he did it.

The Augusta Standard advises all Democrats to "stand aloof and take no part in the demonstrations" at the reception of Sheridan. The editor evidently regards it as an Republican celebration. So were the celebrations of Sheridan's victories from which Democrats also stood aloof.

John Minor Botts, who was defeated as a delegate to the Virginia Convention from Culpeper County was running on a conservative ticket, contrary to the prevailing impression.

Wade Hampton has written a letter in which he says: "For myself, I confess that I am perfectly willing to see a Constitution adopted by our State conferring the elective franchise on the negro, on precisely the same terms as it is to be exercised by the white man, guarding against the abuse of this privilege by establishing a slight educational and property qualification for all classes."

The Lancaster (Penn.) Examiner has placed the name of Gen. Grant at the head of its columns as the Republican candidate for the next Presidency. When does the Argus propose to follow suit, and fulfill the promise of its "gushing" period of a few weeks ago?

Fred. Douglas has been making speeches in New Jersey which show that his radicalism has not suffered any diminution from the result of the late elections.

A Northern Copperhead periodical declares that the only possible solution of our political difficulties is to restore both the Southern States and the negroes to the condition in which they were before the war.

The vote at the recent elections in Louisiana and Alabama was larger than at the Presidential election of 1860. So much for the assertion of Southern journals that the whites did not vote.

Religious Intelligence.

—The new and very beautiful church edifice just completed by the Methodist Society at Skowhegan, was dedicated on Wednesday. The dedicatory sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. C. F. Allen, late of the Chestnut Street church in this city. The usual service for such occasions prescribed by the Methodist Episcopal church was read by Rev. Mr. Bray, once connected with the Pine Street church in this city. The venerable John Allen, widely known as "Camp-meeting John," was also present and took part in the services. The church is a spacious and handsome one, finished in the most approved modern style, and in excellent taste.

—Rev. S. L. Holman, late of South Berwick, has become pastor of the Baptist church, at Woonsocket, R. I.

—We learn from the Christian Register that the new Unitarian school in Boston, for the education of Christian ministers is now fairly established. Thirteen gentlemen who had been selected by the committee, among a large number of inquirers, have joined the school and have devoted themselves to the work of the winter. A convenient house, No. 8 East Dedham street, has been simply and neatly fitted for their accommodation. It is hoped that the members of the senior class may be ready to enter on the work of the ministry after the first term of eight months. The members of the middle class are to remain two terms in the school and those of the junior class three. Each term is to run from October to May, the remainder of the year to be spent elsewhere. The different departments of instruction are under the charge of various prominent clergymen of Boston.

—A letter from San Francisco says:—"Thus far the experiment of Christianizing the Chinese in California has been anything but a happy one. I am told by friends of the missionaries in China that the influence of the returned Chinese is uniformly against Christianity. Their reasoning is, that if the doctrines of Christ bear such fruit as they have experienced in America, they prefer Confucius or Buddha."

—Father Gleason, a devoted Catholic, has met with great success in northern Missouri, having established four churches and baptized a hundred converts from Protestantism within a short time.

—Bishop Kip of California is laboring earnestly to secure the better keeping of the Sabbath, and lately uttered a severe rebuke of some Episcopalians at San Francisco, who went out of the city for a picnic on Sunday.

—The New York Independent of last week contained an article by Rev. Washington Gladden of North Adams, sustaining the views of Rev. Dr. Bushnell on the atonement. Mr. Gladden says of the three most prevalent theories of the atonement: "According to Princeton, the atonement is a peace offering to an offended Deity; according to Andover, it is an expedient of governmental policy; according to Bushnell, it is the method God takes of showing to men how much he is willing to do and suffer to save them from sin and death."—Mr. Gladden says the Bushnell view has brought to himself joy and inspiration.

—The Pan Anglican synod in London has dispersed without having accomplished anything very important. Matters of controversy were carefully avoided, and the pastoral address adopted makes no reference to ritualism, nor scarcely to anything of interest. It is a very vague exhortation to love and good works, to hold fast the canonical scriptures, to avoid superstition and the Catholic church, and to hold fast the creeds and pure worship of "the church." It has been said with great justice that "the Conference, without knowing exactly what it was doing, agreed to what no one can understand, and the Bishops cannot agree as to what they decided." This is not a satisfactory termination to a gathering which might have been made the means of doing great good.

—Archbishop Purcell of Cincinnati has written a letter in reply to Rev. Thomas Vickers, in which he declares that the Pope has never been opposed to progress; that it is a stale slander to say the Catholic Church is opposed to the circulation of the Bible, and that he himself is opposed to a union of church and state, and prefers the condition of the church in the United States to its condition in Italy, France or Spain.

JOHN HALE, the Veteran Horse Thief, is thus described by a Waterford correspondent of the Lewiston Journal:

This notorious individual, now seventy-seven years old, has spent over fifty years of his life in prison for horse stealing. He has never been known to show a thievish propensity for any other kind of property except that pertaining to horse gear, such as harnesses, wagons and robes. His love for a good horse is unquestionably a monomania, in part his is a case of horse-jockeyism run mad. In appearance he is the last man one would suppose to be the great horse thief—very gentlemanly and mild, with the expression of a kind, good, latherly old man, smart for his years, and intelligent. He closed his last term this spring, and has passed the summer at the residence of a wealthy sister in Waterford, his native place. A few weeks ago he began to give evidence that his "horse distemper" was beginning to rage, by a nervous and exceeding restlessness. Finally one day he disappeared and the next known of him was by bills received in town, advertising a horse and wagon stolen in Freedom, N. H., which had been seen in the possession of an old man with a long white beard, &c., answering the description of the poor old man who has had horse on the brain all his life. That horse has probably been disposed of, as another has been announced as "turning up missing" in Porter, Maine.

Last Sunday morning, [20th] about one o'clock, the perturbed spirit of the old man took him to Waterford, for what purpose no one knows. He drove his horse under the shed of Mr. Robinson's store and then began to "show foot" among the neighbors. That fact is known, for in his moonlight perambulations he strolled into the yard of Mr. George Kimball whose daughter happened to be up, and recognizing him, alarmed her father. Mr. Kimball raised the window and asked him what he was prowling about there for at that time of night. The old man stated in answer that he had disturbed no one and immediately left, went under the shed, which was the next building, backed his horse out and hurriedly drove off. Sunday the town was pretty thoroughly scoured for honest John, but he has probably "left for parts unknown."

A "RUMP PRESIDENT."—The following is a good point made against the President by an eminent Republican:

The President has denounced Congress (and in this he is copied by his Democratic followers) as guilty of usurpation. There is a phrase which our enemies have applied to us that I dislike to name in this presence; but it is the chief gem of Democratic literature in this contest, and therefore I must refer to it. This Congress is called a "Rump Congress." I have this to say in response—that if we have a Rump Congress because these rebels are not yet allowed to legislate for this land which they sought to destroy, we have got a Rump President too—elected by the same voters, by the same States, by the same people, precisely, that elected this Congress. And what is more, when he swung around the circle, talking about this Congress being an illegal body, "hanging," he said, "as it were, on the verge of the Government," I have this to reply, that if this Congress is an illegal body, then he has himself taken money illegally from the Treasury. The Constitution which he has sworn to support declares that no money shall be taken from the Treasury except by appropriation by law. This Congress has voted him, for the last two years, $25,000 as President of the United States, and every month he has gone to the door of your Treasury and drawn his monthly salary, by virtue of this law passed by this Congress. And if this is not a legal Congress, he has certainly robbed that money from the Treasury, and should be compelled to refund it.

A CURIOUS CASE.—The facts appearing in the following narrative were disclosed in the trial of a case before the United States Commissioner's Court in New York:

An ex-marshal is charged with having conspired with other parties, while in the government service, to obtain the release of a prisoner from the State of Maine accused of counterfeiting. The plan of the deputy marshal, who was to receive seven hundred dollars for his services, is alleged to have been this. Under his directions a room was hired in Bleeker street and fitted up with a limited quantity of machinery, dies, and sheets of counterfeit postal currency, so as to represent the den of a counterfeiter. Then the deputy, with a party of officers not in the secret, made a descent upon this room and boldly seizing upon the implements and the currency carried them off.—A little stir was made about it in the newspapers and the innocent officers prided themselves upon having done rather a good thing. The deputy marshal was then to have made known to the authorities that the prisoner had imparted to him the valuable information on which he acted, and it was expected that the government would in return release the prisoner. It is charged, however, that the marshal only carried the plot far enough to receive the seven hundred dollars, and then remained contented with the work he had done, much to the disgust of the prisoner, who was pining for liberty. The device was so ingenious that if there had really been honor among the thieves, it would probably have succeeded.

MERCANTILE FAILURES IN NEW YORK.—Special dispatches to the Boston papers state that reports of mercantile failures Thursday increased the growing mistrust in mercantile paper. The failures of two heavy firms engaged in the cotton, tea and hemp trade were reported in the afternoon.

Mr. Alvan Griffin of Kennebunk, who a week or two ago started from Cape Porpoise to take a fishing boat to Moosom river has not been heard from. A few days since one of the sails and some pieces of the boat were found on the beach. He leaves a wife and child.

The Biddeford Union says Charles E. Dunnels of Newfield, in attempting a few days ago to stop a yoke of half tamed bulls from running was trampled upon by the team. He survived only two hours.

"I shall," says the General, "leave Boston for Portland Monday morning and spend the afternoon and night with you."

The full arrangements for his reception will be announced on Monday.

THE MATCH GAME of Base Ball between the "Butchers" and the Eons was played yesterday afternoon on the grounds near the Arsenal. Mr. Hobson of the Active Club acted as umpire. The game was called at 3 o'clock, and the days have now become so short that only five innings could be played. It will be seen by the following score that the Eons were butchered:

EON.	O.	R.	BUTCHERS.	O.	R.

The Butchers have played three match games, beating the Westbrook Club, Scrub Nine and Eons, and will now retire from the lists for the season.

THE FIRST BAPTIST FAIR.—This festival so long looked for, so often deferred, is now at hand. A reference to our advertising columns will give the programme proposed by the ladies of the Society. Other attractions which are being prepared will be duly announced.

We understand that arrangements are being made for excursions over the various railroads to attend the fair. We suggest to our citizens the advantage of purchasing season tickets at $1 each, thereby securing admission to two first class concerts and also the reading of Barker's rich and humorous poem, besides the two afternoon entertainments.

It will be observed that the tickets for the reading of "The First Courtship" are sold for fifty cents, while those purchasing season tickets will pay but twenty cents for the same entainment. So we say buy season tickets.

OBTAINING GOODS UNDER FALSE PRETENCES.—In the Municipal Court yesterday, Joseph Levy, a clothing dealer, was brought up on a complaint made by Mr. J. T. Lewis, wholesale dealer in this city, who charges that, on the 21st of September by fraudulently representing that he was doing a good business and owed only about $2500, he succeeded in obtaining about $600 worth of goods; whereas, complainant alleges that Levy at that time was owing more than $6000, and since has gone into bankruptcy.

Levy waived examination, through his counsel, W. E. Morris, Esq., and furnished sureties in the sum of $1000 for his appearance at the November term of the Supreme Judicial Court.

NEW MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—A company has been formed in this city for the business of manufacturing Kimball's jump-seat carriages. The capital stock is $50,000, one half of which has been taken by C. P. Kimball, Esq., the inventor, and the balance is taken up in this city. The business is to be under the general direction of Mr. Kimball, with Mr. John Gould as Secretary and Treasurer. A lot of land on the corner of Cumberland and Preble streets has been secured and buildings for the manufactory are now going up. It is expected to be in operation about the first of December, and will give employment to about fifty hands.

A RARE CHANCE.—We learn that our esteemed citizen Mr. William F. Chadwick, who is known as an excellent connoisseur and amateur artist, has concluded arrangements to leave his native city, and to take up his residence and transact business in Cuba. Many of our readers are aware that Mr. Chadwick has an extensive collection of paintings, some of which are the work of his own pencil, and others are from the hands of various artists of distinction; and they will learn with interest that there is a probability of the whole of this valuable collection being offered at auction before his departure.

MR. ANDREWS, Centre street, has Hours at Home, and other Periodicals.

TRIAL OF THE STEAM-SPREADING NOZZLE.—The trial of Oyston's Steam-Spreading Nozzle, at the foot of Preble street yesterday afternoon, was very satisfactory. This is a great thing, not very expensive, and is calculated, we think, to come into general use. It is so arranged that the water may be thrown in a solid stream or spread, as circumstances may require, being completely under the control of the person holding the pipe. F. A. Farnsworth is the selling agent for the New England States. The hose used on this occasion was manufactured by Mr. John L. Shaw of this city and proved to be of the best quality.

ACCIDENT.—A young man named Thomas Arnold, who works in Partington's saloon, fell last evening from the top to the bottom of the flight of stairs leading to Swasey's billiard saloon, striking on his head and sustaining severe injuries. He was taken into Partington's saloon and Dr. French was called to attend him. Subsequently he was taken to his home. It could not be ascertained last night how seriously he had been injured.

A SAD SIGHT.—Four boys, the oldest not exceeding five years of age, got beastly drunk yesterday noon, and in their endeavors to keep themselves together and to move off in good order, collected a crowd opposite Harris's hat store on Middle street. One of them, the largest, soon became helpless, and while the others were trying to raise him, Deputy Constable Hawkes came along, gathered them up and took them to the police station. We hope the fiend who sold these children liquor may be brought to justice.

PERSONAL.—We had the pleasure of a call yesterday from Mr. Potter of Westerly, R. I., manufacturer of presses, who, it will be recollected, four years ago broke one of his legs in our office by a fall, so badly that it had to be amputated below the knee. He has supplied himself with so excellent a substitute that no one would be aware that he had a false limb. He is in excellent health and spirits and moves about as rapidly as ever, attending to his business in the most faithful manner.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC.—The following are the receipts of the Grand Trunk Railway for the week ending Oct. 5th, 1867:

Passengers,	$56,371 00
Express Freight, Mails and Sundries,	5,000 00
Freight and Live Stock,	98,959 00
Total,	$160,330 00
Corresponding week last year,	144,211 00
Increase,	$16,119 00

JOSEPH HICKSON,
Secretary and Treasurer

THOSE PEARS.—In passing down Middle street, we noticed in the windows of Clark & Lowell's boot and shoe store, as fine a lot of pears as ever our eyes were allowed to feast upon. They were raised by Mr. Breed, of Lynn, Mass. The largest weighs twenty ounces and is twelve and a half inches in circumference; and, judging from its exterior appearance, would improve on further acquaintance. No person of ordinary appetite would ask for a pair of them.

THE services to-morrow evening in the Chestnut Street M. E. Church will be unusually interesting. The Martha Washington Society is too well known in this city to need a word of commendation from us. For twenty-seven years it has been steadily at work in deeds of Christian charity, and has strong claims upon the material aid of the public.

PATENTS.—Patents have been granted Chas. C. and James Purington of Bath, for improved washing machine; Arthur Huston of Bristol, for improvement in needle threaders; S. Z. Leslie of Hartland, and S. W. Porter of Boston, Mass., for improvement in carriage corner body irons; Antonio F. Smith of Ellsworth, for improvement in ventilators.

WE see by the Springfield Republican that our townsman, Mr. J. W. Adams, has lately invested $10,500 in real estate in that city. He was in town last evening, and advertises his fruit trees, &c., in to-day's paper. His numerous customers here will govern themselves accordingly.

WE are informed that Evergreen Cemetery is often made a horse pasture! Horses are seen there frequently upon the graves! Such things ought not to be. We hope some means will be adopted to put a stop to such desecrations. This Cemetery is a beautiful place and let it not be trampled upon by horses.

E. C. ANDREWS, at his school book, music and periodical depot, No. 36 Centre street, opposite Lancaster Hall, has received the illustrated and sporting newspapers for the coming week. All the monthly periodicals are on his counter as soon as published.

WE learn that the fine span of gray horses of Col. Jones, of the Marine Corps, with the carriages, harnesses, &c., have been purchased by Surgeon Ten Broeck of the army, at Portland, for about $1100. A nice team, and a good bargain for the purchaser.

THE price of tickets for the grand ball to be given Monday evening at City Hall has been fixed at $5 instead of $10, as heretofore announced. This is far better as it brings them within the reach of many who would think $10 a little exorbitant.

MISTAKE.—The horse of Capt. Chase was not stolen as announced yesterday morning, but strayed and was found on the street by Charles Mullen, and returned to Mr. Chase the next morning.

TAX PAYERS, if they would avoid a jam and save the discount, should not wait until Thursday, the day when the discount expires, but should step to the Treasurer's office and pay them now.

MASONIC HALL.—The Masonic Hall, on Exchange street, will be thrown open for exhibition to the public, if the weather is pleasant, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 5 o'clock P. M. to-day, and from 7 to 9 o'clock this evening.

MONDAY is to be a holiday with the children of the public schools. See advertisement.

Gorgas has reported for duty in place of Surgeon Gihon. Acting Ensign John Dennett has been ordered to the Receiving Ship 'Vandalia.' The U. S. S. 'Piscataqua' went into commission on Monday, all of her officers having reported. It is not yet known when she will sail. The U. S. S. 'Lenapee' has arrived at the Yard from the quarantine, and been put out of commission. There are now about six or eight old ships, that have been subject to the yellow fever, lying at the Yard, waiting for repairs. They will probably lay by until spring. The 'Galena' has been moved and attached to the 'Vandalia' as an enlargement of the Receiving Ship. A. J. McIntire has been removed as Master Machinist. —The Rockland Democrat informs us that Stephen A., son of Stephen W. Laughton, of that place, a lad of 17 years, left home about half-past eleven o'clock in the forenoon, with his rifle, alone, and went to Lindsley Grove, on the south side of Middle street, perhaps a half a mile from home. About noon he thinks, he discharged his gun and the breech-pin was blown out and struck him near the left temple crushing the skull and removing it from the brain over a space of an inch and a half long and over an inch wide. Nothing was known of him until 5 o'clock when he returned home with his head bound up with a handkerchief. He brought with him his shattered gunstock and the breech-pin. The latter he took from the wound in his head. He thinks he fell asleep, but no doubt he was insensible for hours. He is in possession of his senses the most of the time, rests well and there is some hopes of his recovery.

THE CABINET ORGAN.—The single house of Mason & Hamlin has succeeded so far in outstripping its rivals, that the question, "Who makes the best reed organ?" is no longer an open one. Of the excellence of these instruments we have, for our own part, become perfectly satisfied by frequent personal trials of the Mason & Hamlin instruments, and of various others. It is patent and undeniable.—N. Y. Evening Post.

CHARLEY SHAY'S QUINCUPLEXAL TROUPE is one of those entertainments where one pays his money and takes his choice. If he has a taste for either dramatic, tepischorean, musical or canine performances, he will find something to his mind in the course of the evening. The dog "Fanny" is a genuine prodigy, and is no doubt a lineal descendant of the wonderful animal once owned by Mr. Alfred Jingle, of historic fame. Deering Hall was well filled last evening by an appreciative audience. The company will give their last entertainment tonight.

The River Ide Institute

This institution, which was incorporated by the State of New Jersey April 8th, 1867, for the education of the orphans of soldiers and sailors who died in the service of the United States will be ready to commence operations in a month or two. It is located at Riverside, formerly known as Progress, in New Jersey, on the banks of the Delaware. The building is now rapidly approaching completion. It is a large and substantial brick structure, surmounted by a stone cupola. The building is 120 feet in length by 44 feet in width, and is four stories in height. The ground floor is intended for dining room, kitchen, state room, laundries, &c. The next floor is divided into three apartments, intended for a reception room, school room and a recitation room. The upper floors are to be used for sleeping apartments for the boys. There will be eighty rooms with four beds in a room. Large porticoes are to surround the house. The building is yet in an unfinished state, but when completed it will be a very handsome and imposing edifice. The grounds around the Institute comprise six acres. On one side of the building is a fine grove where the boys can amuse themselves by various out-door sports, and on the other side and at the rear there is sufficient space to raise vegetables and give the juveniles an insight into farming.

The property originally belonged to Samuel Bechtold, Jr., Esq., who founded and laid out the town of Progress. He disposed of it to the Trustees of the Riverside Institute upon very reasonable terms. The purchase money has been paid and the deed of it passed into the possession of the Trustees a short time ago.

It is contemplated to receive 100 boys at the commencement, and raise an endowment of $100,000 for their maintenance. From year to year the number will be increased until 500—the full capacity of the building—is reached.

The Trustees of the Riverside Institute are Hon. William B. Mann, Lewis R. Broomall, Esq., Hon. James M. Scovel, Hon. W. W. Ware of New Jersey, Henry Gorman, Esq., and J. E. Coe, Esq.

The funds which have enabled the Trustees to purchase the property, and which are to constitute the endowment fund, have been raised through the exertions of the Washington Library Company, which is chartered by the State of Pennsylvania. The subscriptions range from $1 to $5, and about one-half of the amount proposed to be raised has already been secured. Each subscriber receives a fine steel engraving

Messrs. Geo. A. Cooke & Co., bankers, of Philadelphia, are the receivers for the Washington Library Company, and take charge of all the funds on behalf of the Institute. Such a noble cause deserves success, and all the members of the firm have taken a personal interest in the matter, and are working energetically to secure the Institution on a sure foundation.

A man in Wisconsin claims the $19,000 received at the Treasuay Department some time ago without an accompanying explanation, and which were finally placed to the credit of the conscience fund. Boston Boot and Shoe Market.

BOSTON, Oct. 24.

The Boot and Shoe market for the week has ruled dull, and in the heavy line of goods a general quiet prevails, with scarcely sufficient demand to be denominated business. The few buyers in market seem to be holding only for extra inducements, and manifest but little desire to purchase. Advice from the West report payments as backward for past sales. Consequently the trade here are retrenching on orders and manufacturing should be reduced to the lowest point in quantity for the time being and continue operations. As previously noticed, there is quite an active business doing with a limited number of manufacturers engaged in making fine goods for the retail trade of the Eastern and Middle States: this trade should now be at its height, but the general demand is not quick, and is below that of former seasons. This is owing in part to the facilities for buying often; the stringency in the money market also produces a feeling of distrust among retail dealers as to a good Fall trade. Hence they are doing their way along from week to week, buying and ordering light. Prices continue firm and unchanged for seasonable goods to order; for goods on hand, of the medium and poorer qualities, prices are nominal and inclined to recede. At the public sales during the week but a light business has been done, and very little interest manifested in buying. The shipments of Boots and Shoes by rail and sea for the week were 22,651 cases.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

The Cotton Crop.

Neill Brothers & Co. give a statement of the United States Cotton crop of 1866-7, by which it appears that the total amounted to 2,076,039 bales. They add that "the Atlantic States are now so interlaced by railways that it is impossible to separate them. North and even South Carolina have delivered a considerable proportion of their crop through Virginia ports, while the Florida receipts come in great part from Georgia, and Savannah has robbed Mobile of about 20,000 bales Alabama Cotton, which came to Savannah by way of Eufaula, &c. The great bulk of the Tennessee crop and a portion of that of Arkansas has come north from Memphis and Nashville, instead of being sent South to New Orleans, as formerly. We, therefore, classify the Atlantic States altogether, New Orleans, Tennessee, &c., together, and Mobile and Texas by themselves, and compare with the minimum figures which we published as our estimate in our circular of Nov. 20, 1866.

	1866-7.	Crop delivered.	Estimate.
Atlantic States and Florida	638,811	600,000
Mobile	288,516	250,000
New Orleans, Tennessee, &c.	1,012,848	1,000,000
Texas	135,914	200,000
	2,076,039	2,050,000

The above figures for the Atlantic States include the 20,000 bales properly belonging to Mobile, and the New Orleans figures include 10,000 bales properly belonging to Texas. Had this Cotton been delivered as in former years the result would have tallied still more exactly with the estimate.

THE DREADFUL BOY.

[From the Northern Monthly for November.]

"There he is!" uttered Miss Cottle, in a half-whisper, mingled of terror and detestation in about equal parts.

"Who?" queried Mrs. Bagg.

"That dreadful boy!" said Miss Cottle.

The ladies were entering Mrs. Joy's front-gate, having come, as per invitation, to attend a tea-party given by the mother of the boy.

Tommy sat on the front-door step, in the hot sun of that August afternoon, with an old skate strapped on to his naked foot. It was a very rusty skate, and it was a very dirty little foot; but Tommy was seemingly rapt in admiration of the rout ensemble.

"Hullo!" he cried, by way of a polite salutation to the ladies, as, hearing the gate slam, he looked up and beheld them approaching.

"How d'e do, Thomas?" said Miss Cottle, extending a hand experimentally, with the air of a timid stranger making advances to a bull-dog.

"All right!" sung out Tommy good naturedly. "Go ahead! Choo! choo! choo!" imitating a steam-engine.—

Miss Cottle made all haste to get past Tommy, who got up suddenly and struck out on his skate, as though he imagined the stone step to be the smoothest ice, falling, as a result, heavily upon Miss Cottle, who flung him off with indignant energy, much as if he were a monstrous toad. Tommy fell over backward, striking his head on the stone, and immediately began to rub the spot and to bawl with all his might.

Miss Cottle trembled with excitement. "Good enough for him!" she muttered sotto voce.

But young Mrs. Bagg, who, though not yet a mother, loved children, bent over Tommy with maternal solicitude, putting her hand on his head.

"Le' me' lone! mean ole thing!" roared Tommy.

"Did it hurt you, little Tommy?" said Mrs. Bagg's sweet voice.

Tommy looked up in surprise, and immediately stopped.

"Why, what a bump!" continued Mrs. Bagg, "but here comes mother, Tommy. How do you do, Mrs. Joy?"

"Walk in, ladies," said Mrs. Joy, at the door; "you'll excuse me, I hope. I was in the kitchen, and I didn't hear you rap. You've come early—all the better. What's the matter Tommy, dear?"

"Nuffin!" said Tommy, and—"He fell down and bumped his head," said Mrs. Bagg, both in the same breath.

"I do' want no caudfire on!" cried Tommy.

"O dear?" he murmured, rubbing his hot eyes with his dirty hand till his tear-moistened face was a sight to behold, "I wish it 'ud freeze!"

Shortly after, Miss Cottle, who had laid her things aside, and taken a seat in the parlor by the open window with her "work" in her hands, looking out, beheld Tommy swinging on the gate in perilous fashion. "I'd like to know," said the maiden lady contemptuously, "what good there is in a youngster like that? He is only a plague."

Mrs. Bagg, who sat opposite, engaged in emoroidering a soft little flannel blanket, looked up with a smile.

"Ask his mother, Miss Cottle!"

Mrs. Joy had "excused herself" to the ladies for a few minutes.

"Oh! mothers will be mothers," said Miss Cottle, with an emphasis that could leave no doubt on her hearer's mind as to her contempt for that peculiarity in some women. "They never can see their young ones' faults. That boy does nothing but get into mischief, and wear out clothes, and eat victuals, from one week's end to another. His mother likes him, just because he is her own. That is natural enough."

"Do you know," Mrs. Bagg quietly remarked, "what Doctor Franklin once said, when he was asked what was the good of some recondite and abstruse truth that had just been discovered, and which no one could see any particular value in?"

"Can't say as I do," said Miss Cottle, trying hard to imagine what a recondite and abstruse truth might be.

"He said by way of reply, 'What is the good of babies?'"

"Well he might!" Miss Cottle rejoined.—"And a wise man he was too, if ever there was one."

"Ah! but he asked the question ironically. Miss Cottle. He thought the good of babies must be apparent to every one, and of them, so of the new-found truth—in its infancy of no absolute use in itself, perhaps, except to be loved for its own sake; but it will grow.—It is in Tommy's future that you must look for his usefulness to show itself."

"His future!" exclaimed Miss Cottle. "Mrs Bagg, I tremble for that boy's future. He'll come to no good; mark my words. A perfect little imp of Satan, if ever there was one."

"Why, Miss Cottle!" protested Mrs. Bagg

"Oh! but you don't know him," said the maiden lady, warming with her subject.—"Why, don't you believe, when he had the scarlet fever last spring, the minister called to see him, and told him about heaven and the angels, and how, if he was a good boy, he would go there, and wear a gold crown, and have a harp in his right hand, the little reprobate up and asked him if he could have a little black teller to play with up ter heaven!"

Miss Cottle paused to note the effect of this astounding revelation on her auditor. What was her horror at seeing Mrs. Bagg throw back her curly head and send forth a merry peal of laughter.

"Well, I'm sure!" ejaculated Miss Cottle with an angry sniff.

"O dear!" sighed Mrs. Bagg, recovering, "please excuse my laughing, Miss Cottle; but the idea was so perfectly ridiculous—ha, ha, ha! The child spoke with perfect honesty, no doubt."

"Oh! he's honest enough. Far be it from me to do him any injustice, Mrs. Bagg, and his mother does say he never told a lie in his life. But that's his brazen hardihood. He's such a little rascal that he's got no shame in him, and don't care enough about his pranks to think of denying 'em. Why, last winter when we gave our tea-party," (Miss Cottle kept house with another maiden Cottle, her sister Tabitha, in the great old house they were born in, and in which they had ever since dwelt,) "don't you think Mrs. Joy brought that dreadful boy along, and let him run all over the house. He went up into the garret and found a box full of dried barberries, and ate some of them; but they were too sour for his precious delicate stomach, and what does he do but fill his pockets with them, and come down into the pantry when we were all in the parlor, and get into my jar of marmalade that I put up with the best white sugar, pound for pound, and eats it half up, and fills the jar up with the barberries out of his pockets, soaking 'em down into the marmalade with his nasty little fingers, and then gong out-doors without any cap on, and playing in the snow till he had washed off every sign of what he'd been up to. And when I went into the pantry to get the tea, the shelves were one smear! I told Mrs. Joy, and she questioned him, and he owned up to it, and said it was good, the little hog! And she shut him up in the north bed-room to punish him; as if he cared for that! He took and chawed up an old newspaper that was spread on the stand, and stuffed the keyhole full of paper wads. And, by-an-by, after he was let to come out, he went all over the house, as still as a mouse, and stuffed up all the keyholes, so'st we was bothered 'most to death for a week after. And when I told his father of it, he never was punished for it at all. No wonder he's such a reprobate."

"Oh! yes, he was, Miss Cottle," said Mrs. Joy, who had entered unnoticed by the door at the speaker's back.

"La!" exclaimed Miss Cottle, quite disconcerted.

"His father took him up-stairs," continued Mrs. Joy, "at noon, right after dinner, as soon as he came home after meeting you, Miss Cottle, and stripped all his clothes off him—"

"He did!" interrupted Miss Cottle, much gratified; "and did he flog him severely?"

"Oh no! Mr. Joy never flogs, you know.—He says he was nearly flogged out of his skin when he was a boy, and the recollection of it hurts him to this day. He declares he'll never flog a child of his. Mr. Joy's got peculiar views on the subject of punishing children.

"Well, then, what did he strip him for?"

"To make him put on his night-gown and go about in it all the rest of the day."

"Fudge!" exclaimed the spinster; "as if he'd care for that!",

"But he did, Miss Cottle. It nearly broke his little heart. He hasn't forgotten it to this day; and more than that, he hasn't forgotten what it was for. That's why he hates the sight of your house so. He says it's a mean old house."

"He don't like me very well, either, I guess," said Miss Cottle, with a sniff.

"Well, perhaps not," said Mrs. Joy, demurely.

Other ladies arriving at this juncture, the conversation was broken off, and Tommy was lost sight of for the hour.

He was out in the back garden, turning handsprings on the grass. Tommy was not yet out of frocks and the boy detested his drawers in hot weather, and usually shed them at an early hour in the day. Miss Cottle's window did not command a view of the back-garden, fortunately, or her eyes would have been fearfully shocked at the display Tommy made in the course of his gymnastic performances.

By and by he grew tired and strolled into the house in quest of his mother.

The parlor was full of ladies when Tommy entered, sidling up to his mother with his little finger in his mouth.

"What have you been doing all this time, little Tommy?" asked Mrs. Bagg, who sat near Mrs. Joy, extending her hand as she spoke.

"Playin' han'springs," answered Tommy, taking the soft hand in his dirty paws with childish confidence.

"And what is that?" returned Mrs. Bagg, who was not very well posted on the subject of juvenile amusements it would seem.

"Don't you know?" said Tommy. "I show yer!" and flop he went, heels over head, upon the parlor floor, his naked extremities flying up in the air as his frock descended about his head.

To say that Miss Cottle screamed, is to make a very unaffected statement of a thrilling sensation. She not only screamed, but she nearly fell from her chair, and turned very white in the face; and but for the timely production of a camphor-bottle, which was held to her nose, it is possible she would have swooned outright. As it was, there was quite a lively little excitement about her for a few minutes, under cover of which Tommy stroll'd out doors again.

"What the [illegible] will come to!" said Miss Cottle to Mrs. Bagg, as they walked home together at dusk, (being next door neighbors to each other,) there's no telling.—Talk about such an imp's future! He's as likely to be a circus man as anything else—I've no hopes of him, not a bit! I only hope he won't live to be hung, there!"

There came a time, which comes in the life of all little boys in this great country, when Tommy had to be put in school. His mother had already taught him the alphabet, and at school he set out at once on the acquirement of the three r's—reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic—which constitute the basis of a commercial education, as everybody knows.—Mr. Joy was a thriving dry-goods dealer, and he meant to have his boy follow in his own footsteps. But it was not long before he discovered that Tommy gave no sort of promise in that direction.

Tommy was not a studious youth in school. To reading and writing he took kindly enough, but arithmetic was a stumbling block to him. Old Mr. Signet, the schoolmaster, declared, Tommy was the "worst scholar" he ever had in his school. Arithmetic was schoolmaster Signet's hobby. He used to interrupt the routine of study in the school to make long "remarks" to his pupils on his favorite theme.

"There is nothing so beautiful as a mathematical demonstration," he would say. "A sum will always prove itself. If you make a blunder, no matter how slight, figures will show it to you. Figures never blunder. Just so certain as you do the sum right, according to rule, it comes out with the most beautiful accuracy to the identical result called for, no matter how complicated or roundabout may have been the way to the quotient."

Tommy was set to learn the multiplication-table before he had learned to read. It was a part of Mr. Signet's system to ground his boys as soon as possible in the knowledge of that great sheet-anchor of our commercial edifice, as the schoolmaster was wont to phrase it, somewhat after the fashion of Sir Boyle Roche, who smelt a rat, who saw it floating in the air, and who would nip it in the bud.

When Tommy was called up to recite the table, he balked at the first pull.

"Twice one," said the teacher, promptingly. Not a word from Tommy.

"How much are twice one, Thomas?"

"Don't know," said Tommy.

"Twice one are two," said Mr. Signet.

"Be they?" said Tommy.

"Yes. Repeat."

"How d'ye know they be?" was the next question.

"How do I know, said the astonished teacher, "I learned that when I was littler than you are, Thomas."

"Who told ye?"

"Eh? Why, my teacher told me," answered Mr. Signet, a little confounded by the somewhat novel course the conversation was taking.

"How'd he know?"

"Why, what's this? what do yon mean, Thomas? Every body knows that twice one are two"

"I don't, though," persisted the dreadful boy.

"It is written here in the arithmetic, said Mr. Signet, taking up a copy of Olny's Geography in his confusion at this remarkable mathematical hitch.

"Perhaps the 'rithmetic lies, said Tommy, demurely.

That was a puzzler. However, by dint of producing two apples, and with them illustrating, Mr. Signet was enabled at last to demonstrate to this cautious truth-seeker the fact that twice one were two. It was only by a long course of demonstration, backed by ocular illustration, that Tommy was at last inducted into a knowledge of the great table; and such was the boy's constant aversion to arithmetic, that he soon came to rank very low in the esteem of the old schoolmaster, who viewed his astonishing stupidity with a sort of pitying contempt. Tommy got into disgrace by slow and sure degrees. He would whisper in study-hours, eat beech-nuts and apples, stick up his hair in imitation of Mr. Signet, and make the scholars laugh and misbehave in innumerable ways, taking his floggings in the most philosophic manner, as a part of the sorrows of life merely. He never seemed to associate the idea of reformation with the thwackings he got from Schoolmaster Signet's ruler.

"He's the most hardened little wretch!" declared Miss Cottle, when Tommy came under discussion in feminine circles, as he often did. "Nothing touches him. His father has much to answer for, Mrs. Porter. He's spared the rod till he's spoiled the child, and that's Scripture. If that boy wasn't born to be hung, I'd like to know why!"

But when Tommy was about ten years old, his fortunes took a sudden turn for the better. Old Mr. Signet died, universally lamented, and George Collier, 'Squire Collier's son, was made schoolmaster. George had just graduated at Yale, and had rather more advanced views on educational matters than his predecessor. He introduced the practice of having declamations and compositions in school on Saturday forenoons, as a wind-up for the week. Poor as Tommy was in arithmetic, he came out in this new field of endeavor in fine style, and soon ranked high in the elegant art of "speaking pieces"

Miss Cottle had now discovered Tommy's bent, and was able to trace his disgraceful career in the future with a degree of precision.

"He will run away to New York and join a theatre," said she, "and be a low actor—mark my words! What them actors are, and what they come to, everybody knows."

Meantime Tommy was becoming more and more popular among his mates. Saying nothing of his generous nature, which got him into frequent scrapes; saying nothing of his capability of being cheated out of marbles, tops, anything, in short, that he possessed—another proof of his melancholy unfitness for a trader—he was such a little lion on Saturday forenoon that the boys looked upon him with the greatest admiration.

It was the new schoolmaster's practice to allow the boys to declaim pieces of their own choosing, they informing him only of the titles thereof, that he might make out a written programme, which was posted on the school-house door each Friday afternoon, and was consulted with deep interest by such of the village folks as in the habit of attending these weekly "exhibitions." Young Collier's plan did not include any preliminary drilling of the boys; his comments on their oratorical lacks were made in open school at the close of the exercises.

"What do you think, Miss Cottle?" exclaimed Mrs. Porter. I am only surprised that the trustees allow such goings-on in our school-house every week. I shall never go to see their scandalous performances, whoever else may."

This was a thrust at Mrs. Porter, who had a strong liking for these displays of juvenile oratory and histrionics, and scarcely missed a Saturday at the school-house. She had just come down from that seat of learning, where she had been perusing the programme for the morrow, greatly pleased at seeing her boy's name the first on the list of speakers, though the little chap had no more of the oratory in him than a gate post.

"Well, that's as you like, Miss Cottle, of course," she pursued. "I don't see no harm into it. My boy is agoin' to speak a piece of poytry by Martin Farker Tucker, and— But what do you think, Tommy Joy is agoin' to speak?"

"Well—what?" snapped Miss Cottle, curiosity conquering contempt.

"A sermon!" ejaculated Mrs. Porter. "Did you ever?"

"Well, I'm sure! He speak a sermon, indeed! That's like that boy's brazen impudence. Why, Mrs. Porter, if you'll believe me, Mary Jane Peck told me she asked that boy, only last Sunday, as he walked home beside her atter church, how he liked the sermon, and he said—oh! the awfulest language!"

Miss Cottle paused in horror of the mere remembrance.

"Why, what did he say?" queried Mrs. Porter.

"He said it was a 'regular snorter!" Miss Cottle was pale with excitement. "He speak a sermon!"

However, Mrs. Porter so stimulated the spinster's curiosity before leaving her, that she was induced to agree that, for this once, "it'll be the best thing I ever knew of him. Mercy knows I'd be rejoiced to see signs of reform in him."

The little school-room was crowded with expectant auditors the next morning, and there was a great buzzing and humming on the back seats and the front seats. Miss Cottle had a place on the bench of honor by the schoolmaster's own table. Rap! rap! rap! went the ruler, and the house came to order.

Mr. Collier read a chapter from the Bible, repeated the Lord's Prayer, and then the speaking commenced.

Jeremiah Porter, a great hulk of a boy with an immense growth of towy hair—the best arithmetician in school by the way—strode awkwardly to the platform, and with his fingers wandering uneasily over his buttons, mumbled his piece. It was Tupper murdered. And imagine Tupper murdered!

"Speak poor almsm'n uv t'day what none kin 'sure uv to-morrer, Yell out with honest heart th' price thou settist onto yist'd'y" etc.

Tommy was the last on the programme—the place of honor, though Mrs. Porter supposed it was at the other end. The audience was usually alive with curiosity at the prospect of Tommy's sermon, the more so because a good two-thirds of Tommy's declamations were sure to be funny, and the other third usually high tragedy. Any thing serious from those lips promised novelty. Miss Cottle pricked up her ears as the dreadful boy mounted the platform, drew a small desk in front of him, put on a pair of green spectacles, buttoned up his coat, turned up his shirt-collar, and leaned forward upon the table with a face of great solemnity.

"Behubbed breden," he commenced, "God bress your souls, 'ligion is like de Alabama ribber. In de sprin' come de fresh, an' bring in all de ole logs and an' slabs an' sticks dat hab been lyin' on de bank, and carry 'em down de current. Bymby de water go down—den a log cotch here on dis island, den a slab git cotched on de shore, an' de sticks onto de bushes—an' dere dey lie, with'rin an' dryin' till dar come 'noder fresh. Jis' so dar come 'vival ob 'ligion—dis ole sinner brought in, dat ole backslider brought back, an' de ole folks seem comin', an' mighty good times—But, bredden, God bress yer souls, bymby 'vivals gone—den dis ole sinner gits stuck on his ole sin, den dat ole backslider is cotched whar he was afore, on jis' sich a snag—den one arter anoder dat bad gal 'ligion drift along the shore, an' dar dey lie till a new val. Behubbed breden, God bress your souls, keep in de current!"

Before the dreadful boy had got half-way through his declamation, Miss Cottle arose from her seat, white with anger, and stalked out of the room.

"Depend upon it, Tabitha," she said to her sister, when she got home, "that boy was born to be hung. The owdacious little imp of blasphemy!"

When Tommy was about thirteen years old, a strolling company came along, and performed for a week at the little town-hall.

Precisely how it was that these "low acting people" (as Miss Cottle caustically termed them) got hold of Tommy Joy, I have never been told in detail; but I can imagine very easily how it may have come about. So, doubtless, can you—which will save me the necessity of going into particulars. Certain it is, that they did get hold of Tommy, and it is highly probable he would have run away with them but for a disheartening circumstance.

The janitor of the hall was a respectable old man of sixty-five or seventy, white as a badger, and a life long resident of the village. He had no good opinion of theatres, but it was his business to attend daily at the hall. Thus he chanced to learn that Tommy Joy was positively rehearsing a part, with the intention of performing it on the following Saturday night, in conjunction with the company, a female member of whom had flattered the boy nearly out of his senses. Old Job informed Mr. Joy of the state of affairs, and the father assured the old man that he would cure Tommy of that nonsense.

What was the worthy janitor's astonishment then, when the evening came, at finding Tommy on hand, and all ready to perform his part—that of a romantic-looking young ruffian in a wig of long, curling, black hair, a false moustache, and a gorgeous Spanish costume; a disguise which Tommy fondly fancied would be impenetrable. But no sooner had he appeared on the stage, and uttered his first grandiloquent syllables, than he was saluted with an uproarious welcome by the front-seats, who recognized him at once.—Tommy laid his hand on his heart and bowed his acknowledgments with a thrill of agitation.

This sensation had barely subsided when another and a profounder followed. This was nothing less than the appearance of Mr. Joy on the stage, as natural as life. He took Tommy quietly by the ear, lifted off his curly wig with the other hand, and said, "Come home, Thomas!"

Poor Tommy was ready to shrink into his huge boot-tops. He followed his father home without a word, and was put to bed. Nothing was said to him on the subject by his father then, or at any time, but the boy got his fill of "chaff" from his mates, and was cured of his passion for the stage, it seemed.

Miss Cottle was in a sort of a horror of ecstacy over this little episode in Tommy's career.

"What did I tell you?" said she exultantly. "I knew it! I hain't watched that boy for years for nothing. It all comes to pass. He'll be hung yet—he will—mark my words!"

Tommy had become a strapping lad of sixteen, with a great fondness for "the girls," (another trump-card for Miss Cottle,) when Mr. Joy removed to Boston, and took Tommy with him,. Miss Cottle heard of him no more. She never did expect to hear of him again, except in connection with a criminal trial.

A long leap forward.

Miss Cottle was older and yellower and drier and thinner than ever under the influence of her added ten years.

When the minister announced one Sunday, that on the following Sabbath his pulpit would be filled by the Reverend Mr. Joy of Cincinnati, Miss Cottle never thought for one moment that she was doomed to see that dreadful boy in a new character. She went to church as usual that Sunday following. In the handsome-looking young minister who took his seat in the pulpit with such a quiet air, she beheld only a bearded man whose face seemed familiar somehow, and she wondered whether she had ever really seen him before, or had only dreamed of him.

The strange minister arose and read the hymn. Miss Cottle pricked up her ears. The voce was his—more matured, but still his—and the delighted maiden tainted nearly away in meeting. It seemed to her as if the crowning iniquity of that boy's life were about to be consummated, and in her presence!

While Miss Cottle was debating in her mind by what hocus pocus that boy had gotten into Dr. Barton's pulpit, Tommy (I beg pardon! the Reverend Thomas Joy) began to preach. Miss Cottle's soul speedily felt the power of a cultivated eloquence that soothed and conquered her; and when the sermon was over, and she heard the strains of music from the choir floating out over the hushed congregation like the far off harmonies of a dream, she sat in her pew weeping quite comfortably into her handkerchief.

"Ah! it was beautiful, beautiful!" said Miss Cottle, afterward, "I am free to say, Tabitha, this day has been the most powerful experience of my life. The idea of that boy"—she omitted the "dreadful"—coming to preach and pray like that!" Truly the ways of the Lord are wonderful, and past finding out."

The prevalence of a large quantity of inferior and dangerous oils in the market, at a cheap price—many of which are little better than Naptha itself—and the evils consequent on false reports in regard to the PORTLAND KEROSENE OIL, render it a matter of justice to ourselves, as well as safety to consumers, that some notice should be taken of these facts.
